3. Symposium

[October 26th, 13:00-17:00]

3-1. Theme

- Grand challenges in 73rd and 74th Annual meetings
"Strategy MIDORI"; The Capabilities and Competence of Organic Agriculture in Japan.
- The Theme in 74th Annual meetings
The Challenges in Diffusion of Organic Agricultural Production Technologies in Japan with "Strategy MIDORI": Focusing on Frontiers of Technological and Political Difficulties

3-2. Concept

The Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries in Japan (MAFF) launched the medium-long term strategies "Strategy MIDORI", the plan for sustainable food system, on 12 May 2021. This aims at both enhancing engagement of stakeholders at each stage of food supply chains and promoting innovation to reduce environmental burdens.

For instance, "Strategy MIDORI" aims to achieve "50% reduction in risk-weighted use of chemical pesticides by dissemination of the Integrated Pest Management and newly-developed alternatives", "30% reduction in chemical fertilizer use", "Increase in organic farming to 1Mha (equivalent to 25% of farmland)" and so on by 2050.

On the other hand, it is likely that "Strategy MIDORI" does not make proposal of specific methods for implementing those objectives but just expect the dissemination of smart/digital agriculture in practical use.

Anyway, we must meet specific challenges for diffusing organic agricultural production systems with working in research and development of appropriate technologies, ensuring adequate political supports and practical assistances. Considering the importance and urgency on these issues, ARAFE will organize the symposium on "The Expectation for Strategy MIDORI as Propulsion Mechanism for Dissemination of Organic Farming Systems".

5. International Symposium

[October 27th, 10:00-12:30]

2024 International Symposium of the Association for Regional Agricultural and Forestry Economics sponsored by the Japanese Society of Organic Agriculture Science

5-1. Theme

- Scaling up Agroecology from the Policies to Practices:
Transforming Our Research and Education Systems

5-2. Concept

To transcend the global challenges such as climate change, biodiversity loss, hunger, social inequality and so on, the United Nations initiated the Scaling Up Agroecology Initiative at the Second International Symposium on Agroecology held in Rome in 2018. Echoing to this initiative, the countries in the Global North recently launched their respective new agri-food policies that state to transform their current food systems towards more sustainable ones. The European Green Deal in 2019 and Farm to Fork Strategy in 2020, the United States' Innovation Agenda in 2020, Japan's Strategy for Sustainable Food Systems (MIDORI) in 2021 are the parts of these efforts.

While the transformation of our agri-food research and education systems in public and private research institutions, universities, agricultural colleges and high-schools, extension centers are essential to achieving the goals declared in the above mentioned green agri-food policies or transcend them, the speed of paving the roads is heterogeneous among countries and regions. For example, Japan is one of the countries that need scale up and scale out its transformation of agri-food research and education systems.

Against this backdrop, the ARAFE organizes two consecutive international symposia on "Scaling Up Agroecology from Policies to Practices" in 2023 and 2024. In the international symposium of 2024 focuses on "Transforming Our Research and Education Systems". We invite three speakers who involved in the transformation of agri-food research and education systems in the UN, EU, and the US with interdisciplinary approaches.

6. Luncheon Seminar

6-1. Theme

The Essential Role of Intellectual Property Management for the Development of Agriculture, Forestry, and Fishery in Japan

6-2. Concept

There are numerous types of intellectual property in Japan. For instance, wide variety of plants and geographical indications shall be some of the common examples. It must be a crucial strategy to capitalize on such intellectual property to achieve strong comparative advantage of agriculture, forestry, and fishery in Japan. Meanwhile, outflows of intellectual property, such as Japanese new variety of plants are also emerging.

This seminar will discuss the important role of intellectual property management for the development of agriculture, forestry, and fishery in Japan by presenting specific cases and concrete policies.

- ★ This seminar will be held as “Luncheon Seminar”, allowing participants to casually participate even if the participant does not have enough knowledge about IPM or just collect information of related fields.

7. Note

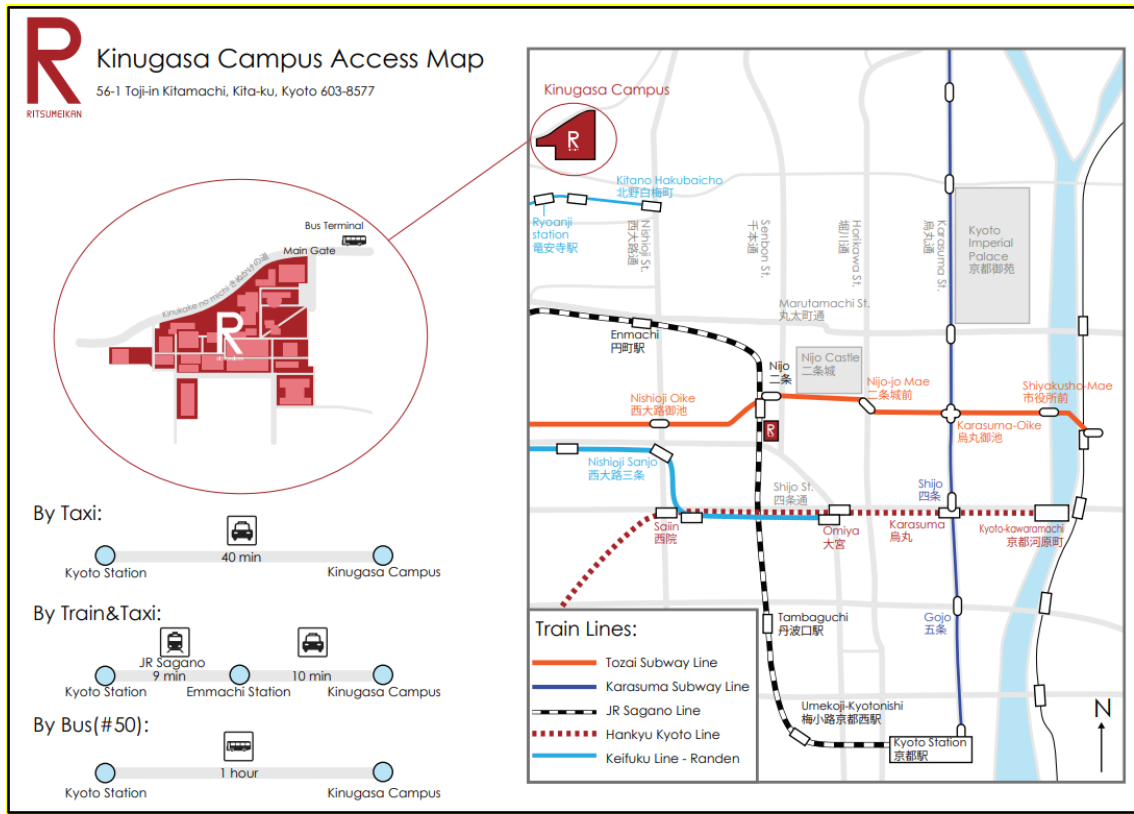

7-1. Accommodation

The secretariat will not arrange for accommodation. Please make your reservations. We recommend making your reservations as early as possible since it is the tourist season.

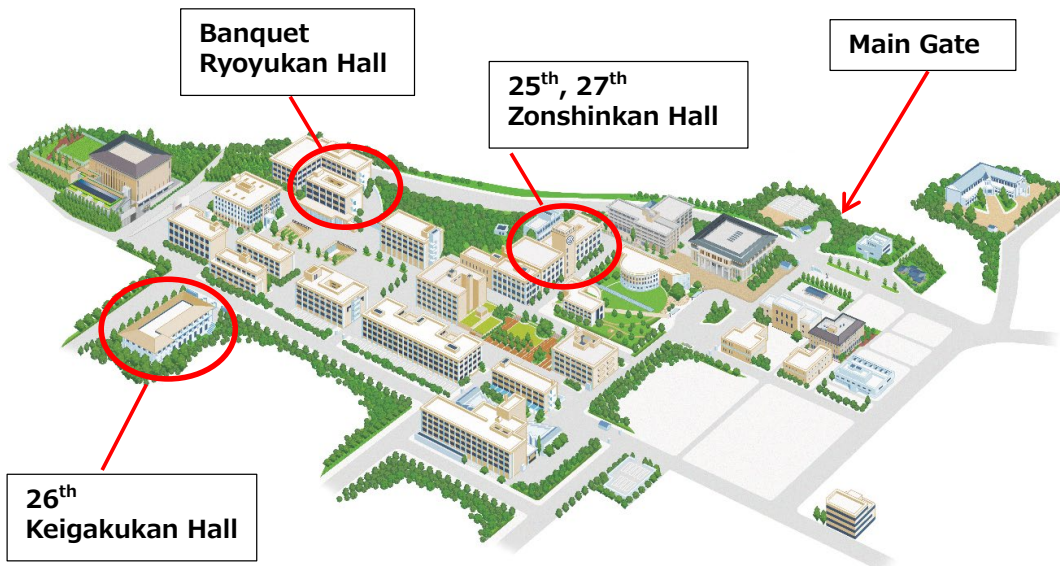

7-2. Meal environment

On October 26th (Sat.) and 27th (Sun.), the Co-op Purchasing Department, cafeteria, etc., will all be closed, and participants will not be able to procure meals on campus. There is only one convenience store and a few restaurants nearby. Please bring your lunch on both days. Please note that no boxed lunches will be sold to general participants.
